Barnstable Police Department Press Release
March 18^h, 2015

Cops for Kids with Cancer

On Wednesday, March 18th Chief MacDonald and members of the Barnstable Police Department welcomed two year old Hyannis resident, Marcus Rivera and his mother Ruth into the station. Marcus came to the BPD to meet with retired Boston Police Officers, Robert Faherty and John McManus as they presented him with a $5,000 donation from Cops for Kids with Cancer.

Cops for Kids with Cancer is a charitable organization made up of current and retired police officers along with other caring individuals that donates approximately $30,000 per month to families with children battling cancer. The donations are meant to help those families cover the various expenses that occur during their children's battle. All of the members of the organization are volunteers and are not paid for their work.

The Barnstable Police Department was glad to be able to host such a worthy organization that dedicates itself to providing financial assistance to the families of children battling cancer.
